News From Around PA

Rainbow Alliance, an organization "advocating for the interests of the gay, lesbian, queer, bisexual, transgendered, and allied community at Pitt" has filed a complaint with the Pittsburgh Commission on Human Relations because of the university's policy which only allows students to use restroom and locker rooms that match the gender on their birth certificate.

Williams Township (Northampton County) is seeking to repeal four land preservation ordinances requiring landowners with more than 10 acres to preserve half their land for open space. This is part of UN Agenda 21.

An atheist has filed a complaint with the PA Human Relations Commission against Prudhomme's Lost Cajun Kitchen in Columbia because the owners offer a 10 percent discount to anyone who brings in a church bulletin on Sundays.

New from National Scene

Obamacare ruling -- the 'jury' is still out on last week's decision. Some are calling Chief Justice John Roberts a traitor, others are calling him a fox. Unless Congress moves to repeal Obamacare, our nation is stuck with the economic and moral consequences.

Fiscal responsibility?

Americans spend $80 billion yearly financing food stamps, but the country has no idea where or how the money is spent. The USDA is secretive about who receives its money. Which stores are doing the most business in food stamps, and what kinds of food are our taxpayer dollars buying? No one seems to know and millions are spent on lobbying to keep that info top secret.

The NJ affiliate of Susan G. Komen for the Cure announced that its $20,000 grant to Planned Parenthood will be renewed this year.

Josh McDowell has launched Just1ClickAway.org, a new website to raise awareness about online pornography which he says is a problem big enough to cause the downfall of the church.

The granddaughter of Hearst Corporation founder William Randolph Hearst, is speaking out against the explicit content found in Hearst Magazines' Cosmopolitan. Hearst has teamed up with model Nicole Weider to petition the Federal Trade Commission that Cosmo be "brown-bagged" and sold to adults only.
