News From Around PA

Homosexual activists are not content that the Cradle of Liberty Scout Council will be vacating the HQ they built and have maintained since 1929, they want Troop 474 out of the "Scout House" in Fairmount Park. They have been meeting in this city owned building and holding events in the surrounding park since 1987.

HB 300 and SB 300 to add "sexual orientation and gender identity" to the PA Human Relations Act, which impacts employment, housing and public accommodation, have been introduced with bipartisan support. Senator Larry Farnese has expressed confidence it will pass in the Senate. Expect bakers, photographers, bed and breakfast owners who believe homosexuality is a sin to be sued, if this passes.

A Lancaster County teenager who has been arrested for attempting to flush the body of her newborn down the toilet could have given her baby to authorities under PA's Safe Haven Law.

Red Lion School District in York County has been threatened by the ACLU over a senior "transgender" student. ACLU was demanding the school place the female student's "chosen" male name on her diploma and allow her to wear a male graduation gown. They also wanted the district to make its anti-discrimination policy "LGBT inclusive." In the end the school, which was in the process of changing its graduation gown policy, allowed this sexually confused student to wear a male gown, but had her legal name on her diploma. And there's been no policy change.

News from National Scene
