News From Around PA

As of October 31st, the Cradle of Liberty Scout Council has vacated the Beaux Arts building HQ it has occupied for 84 years. One Philly homosexual activist noted, "The new national BSA policy of allowing gay youth — but not gay adults — doesn't go far enough."

Drexel University has officially opened the doors to the LGBTQA Student Center, its center for students who identify as homosexual. It joins University of Pennsylvania, Penn State University's main campus and Kutztown University.

Before 2002, people in Pennsylvania were able to get a driver's license using their tax ID number, allowing "undocumented workers" to get one. Representative Mark Cohen has introduced legislation that would allow the tax ID number to be used once again.

Open homosexual Bill Godshall is running against longtime incumbent Hatboro Mayor Norm Hawkes in the Nov. 5 election. He is upset Hawkes vetoed a homosexual special rights ordinance in 2010.

News from National Scene

President Obama wants to spend $75 billion over 10 years in a partnership with states that would bring full-day preschool to all 4-year-olds from families whose income levels are at or below 200 percent of the poverty line. It would require a state match and federal costs would be offset by a new tax on tobacco products.

Federal employees in same-sex domestic partnerships can now enroll their children in their government health care plan. However, the Office of Personnel Management noted it cannot yet extend benefits to the domestic partners.

There's still no end in sight for the Federal Reserve's stimulus program -- known as quantitative easing -- after the Fed met this week and decided to continue buying $85 billion in bonds each month. They have been doing this since September 2012 and said it will continue to do so until the job market improves "substantially." The program is now nearing $1 trillion in total.

This week saw two same-sex "marriages" performed within the walls of the US Supreme Court. They were presided over by Justice Sandra Day O'Connor and Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg. AFA of PA encourages Christians, through education, to become involved in pro-family issues in their community, state and the nation.
