News From Around PA

In what was described as a five-year demonstration project, Pennsylvania got the go-ahead to use federal money to pay private insurers to provide health care to uninsured individuals.

A little-known policy FEMA issued May 5 would indefinitely ban the use of hazard mitigation assistance money for properties that could eventually host horizontal drilling and hydraulic fracturing. This policy immediately affects eight households in Pennsylvania that have suffered recent floods — five in Wyoming County and three in Lycoming County.

U.S. District Judge Arthur J. Schwab wrote in an opinion that a series of National Labor Relations Board subpoenas for UPMC documents, including some that he said were issued at the behest of the Service Employees International Union, were far too broad. However, he granted the agency's application to enforce them, while giving UPMC time to appeal.

News from National Scene

A new study by the Barna Group shows that 54 percent of Christian men and 15 percent of Christian women admitted to viewing pornography at least once a month, compared to 65 percent of men and 30 percent of women who identified as non-Christian and said they watched porn at the same rate.

Gen. Martin Dempsey, the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, said at a Pentagon press briefing this week that "because of open borders and immigration issues," the Islamic State of Iraq and the Levant (ISIL) is an "immediate threat."

Hundreds of Consumer Financial Protection Board officials are paid more than

Supreme Court Justices, senior White House officials, members of Congress, and all state governors, according to an analysis of data for the board's 1,204 workers.

The Freedom From Religion Foundation sent a cease and desist letter demanding Seminole High School in Florida refrain from having a volunteer team chaplain because it's unconstitutional

The You Can Play Project is being pushed on professional teams and universities throughout the United States. The program is supposed to eliminate "homophobia in sports."
