News From Around PA

The National Park Service's 2014 LGBTQ Heritage Initiative has gotten the interest of Philly area homosexual activists who seek to have more than 150 gay historic markers placed in the area!

The state Supreme Court will not reinstate Attorney General Kathleen Kane's law license, clearing a path for a potential Senate vote to remove her from office.

Governor Wolf's 2016-2017 budget address was really a time to lecture and scold the GOP legislature. Wolf offered no specifics of his budget – such as the $33.3 billion in spending and $2.72 billion in new and increased taxes needed to pay for it – other than to characterize it as “responsible.”

West Allegheny Middle School held an anti-bullying program called “Kindness Workshop.” Students were told by teachers to step into a circle if they were gay, poor, an immigrant, or had a parent who had ever been arrested. Parents say this provided more ammo for bullies to use!

Governor Tom Wolf has indicated he is moving forward with plans to shut down the Public Employee Retirement Commission. However, he seems to be forgetting the Commission is a creation of the Legislature and is state law!

News from National Scene

House and Senate GOP are calling on the Obama administration to do more to address outstanding concerns about the Trans-Pacific Partnership between the US and 11 other nations.

Kentucky Senate Bill 7 would re-prioritize funding for family planning by directing state tax dollars to public health departments first, non-public health clinics second and then, if any money is left, to Planned Parenthood.

The minimum Obamacare penalty rises to $695 in 2016 for someone uninsured a full 12 months.

Over the past 7 years, the federal debt held by the public has doubled. Here is one that always hits hard: the debt per taxpayer is about $157,000 according to the US Debt Clock data from the U.S. Treasury Dept. and the Federal Reserve.

In an attempt to strengthen the way the gov't handles personal data of its employees and contractors, the admin announced the creation of the National Background Investigations Bureau, replacing the Office of Personnel Management's Fed Investigative Services.
