News From Around PA

In Philly the Boy Scouts of America Cradle of Liberty Council voted unanimously to accept homosexual adult volunteers and employees into the organization. They expect no pushback from BSA national.

Pittsburgh Public School Board plans to accept a government grant to have Planned Parenthood bring their controversial sex education program -based on the book It's Perfectly Normal--to middle schools.

News from National Scene

The Henry Gerber House in Chicago has been designated a National Historic Landmark, becoming the nation's second LGBT-related property to achieve such recognition. Gerber formed the Society for Human Rights, a group that advocated for homosexual men, in his home in 1924.

Numerous county clerks in Kentucky are denying everyone a marriage license, as a protest to last week's SCOTUS marriage decision.

The ACLU has stated that while the organization supported the Religious Freedom Restoration Act when it passed in 1993, "we can no longer support the law in its current form" because "it is now often used as a sword to discriminate against women, gay and transgender people and others."

The Girl Scouts of Western Washington received a $100,000 donation that could send 500 girls to camp. However, the stipulation was that the money not be used for "transgender girls" (little boys). The GSA promptly returned the money to the "transphobic" donor!

The Cleburne County, Arkansas County Clerk is resigning rather than be forced to issue "marriage" licenses to homosexuals.

The fight for marriage continues in Alabama as 22 counties are not issuing "marriage" licenses to homosexuals. However, the federal judge who struck down their Marriage Protection Amendment, passed by 78% of the voters, said they must comply.

Two California lesbians married there in 2008 and then bought a house in Mississippi. Separating in 2010, they've been trying to get a divorce there ever since, noting they could back to CA to divorce, but "they shouldn't be treated differently than straight couples." They are using the June 26th SCOTUS marriage ruling to renew their divorce efforts in Mississippi. We are a non-profit organization that is totally dependent upon financial gifts from our supporters.
