News From Around PA
Drexel University is this fall launching a Certificate in LGBT Health, which organizers say is the very first its kind across the globe.

The Milton Hershey School last year rejected the application of a 13-year-old boy who was found to be HIV positive. In December the AIDS Law Project of Pennsylvania filed a federal lawsuit against the school saying the boy was being discriminated against because of his HIV status. The school recently settled and will pay the boy and his mother $700,000, and an additional $15,000 in penalties assessed by the U.S. Department of Justice, which investigated the case.

Catasauqua School District just saved over $300,000 when their superintendent resigned -- and was then rehired with a new contract which freezes his wages for three years! He's very serious about controlling the costs in his district.

Cradle of Liberty Scout Council vs. the City of Philadelphia - update. No settlement has been reached and the case has moved back into active litigation.

New from National Scene

Frank Worthen, one of the founders of Exodus International, has formed a new ministry for those seeking to leave the homosexual lifestyle. Restored Hope Network was formed after Exodus' president Alan Chambers told a homosexual group earlier this year that practicing homosexuals can also be Christian.

Wheaton College had joined several other Christian institutions in a federal lawsuit against the contraception mandate in Obamacare. Recently a federal judge dismissed Wheaton's lawsuit saying the Obama administration has sufficiently altered the mandate to include the college's concerns — giving it one year to comply with the revised mandate

Remember the XXX domain which was supposed to make the internet safer by allowing all pornographers to place their porn sites under one domain -- voluntarily? Well, that didn't work so they now want permission to open up three more porn domains, .Porn, .sex, and .adult.

A recent study of 560 US companies found that about one in 10 employers plans to end workers' health insurance as the new healthcare law takes effect. AFA of PA encourages Christians, through education, to become involved in pro-family issues in their community, state and the nation.
