News From Around PA

The U.S. Education Department announced its Office for Civil Rights is holding Penn State accountable for failing to protect students from sexual abuse as was discovered during the scandal involving coach Jerry Sandusky.

Governor Tom Wolf plans to veto a bill that would expand telemedicine options in Pennsylvania but also would restrict its use for abortions. Wolf's press secretary, Lyndsay Kensinger, said that Wolf supported the earlier version of the bill (which included abortion coverage), but plans to veto it because of the abortion restrictions, which she called "unnecessarily restrictive."

News From National Scene

The Democratic governor had asked hospitals to stop performing elective procedures, procedures but did not enforce a ban on abortion clinics performing elective abortions and stated doctors could decide what is considered elective. The Republican-led Kentucky House and Senate voted to give pro-life Attorney General Daniel Cameron power over the state's abortion clinics.

Four men were arrested outside a Greensboro, N.C., abortion clinic. Their alleged crime? Praying in public while the county is under a stay-at-home order due to the coronavirus pandemic. However, the Guilford County ordinance allows outside activities as long as social distancing is practiced, which these men were doing!

Mississippi Governor Tate Reeves categorized religious gatherings and faith-based groups as essential and exempt from shutdown, as long as they follow CDC guidelines. However, Greenville, Mayor Erick Simmons, issued an executive order defying the governor's encouragement to allow drive-in church services and instructed the police to stop and ticket anyone in a church or drive-in parking lot service.

As a result, everyone sitting in their cars in the parking lot of Temple Baptist Church listening to their pastor's sermon received a court summons and a $500 fine!

Disney has introduced a male couple as the parents of two youngsters in the reboot of its popular DuckTales. The show previously had only hinted about Violet's gay dads, but the season three opener left nothing to the imagination.

A push that sought to force media outlets to label President Trump's daily COVID-19 briefings as "scientifically suspect" has been thwarted. The FCC promptly denied the request, saying the sanctions would "dangerously curtail freedom of the press."
