News From Around PA

A federal judge has ruled that the State House has “inappropriately prevented” people who don’t believe in God (or a higher power) from delivering the prayer before the opening session of the State House each day.

A new math course at Penn State University focuses on everything besides math. Professor Marc Fabbri’s “Finite Mathematics” course covers everything from Hillary Clinton’s “strong character” to the “cultural intolerance” to President Lyndon Baines Johnson’s Clean Water Act.

More than 1,000 leftist political advocates, educators and civic leaders from around the country convened in Philly to organize to get out the vote in November.

NWPA National Organization for Women will hold its annual fundraiser in Edinboro on October 6th.

Jeff Guaracino, an open homosexual, is the new president and CEO of tourism-promotion agency Visit Philadelphia. He wants to “bring the community to the boardroom and into marketing campaigns.”

News From National Scene

Cargill Meat Solutions in MN has agreed to pay out $1.5 million to former Muslim workers in order not to face litigation. Management had rescinded policies allowing Muslim employees to take breaks to observe their prayers. Would Christian employees be allowed to take breaks for prayer??

One of the largest school districts in Colorado has ended its contract with EBSCO. This is a “research database” that contracts with schools, but also allows students access to pornography! Does your school have it or other such databases?

US Education Secretary has signed a global UN declaration that suggests the purpose of schooling is to indoctrinate children with the right “values” and teach them to be obedient worker drones.

A business, Christ Fit Gym, paid the Benton High School (Louisiana) football booster club $3,500 for the 2018-19 season to display its logos in the end zones. Americans United for Separation of Church and State filed a federal lawsuit against the school district, complaining the district promoted Christianity and was trying to convert students. Why?? Because the business logos includes a Bible verse and the cross.

New Jersey Appeals Court stopped an attempt by the abortionist Steven Brigham to resume the practice of medicine within New Jersey.
