The University of Pennsylvania is offering a writing course called “Abolish the Family,” touting a common feminist slogan and philosophy. “we will look at the history of family abolition and its threads through various other movements, examine variations in cultural models of family, and imagine new models of collective care together,” the course description states.

The University of PA group Up Against the Occupation, or (u)PAO posted pictures to Instagram showing a statue of the Benjamin Franklin doused in red paint. The group called the statue “a symbol of imperial violence and colonialism.” Do these agitators know the school’s history?? According to the U Penn website, “Franklin was the primary founder and shaper of the new institution which became the University of Pennsylvania.”

“Traditional grading” systems favor the way white people think, a University of Pittsburgh instructor says.

Alex Jennings teaches a seminar in composition and Professional Uses of Social Media, and to implement contract grading. The instructor’s research “focuses on the ways queer theory and disability scholarship intersect with writing pedagogy”.

In PA, at least 628,234 noncitizens have a state driver’s license or a non-driver’s license photo identification. Remember last September Governor Shapiro implemented automatic voter registration when someone got a driver’s license; So, how many of those noncitizens are registered to vote?? An investigation has been announced by Auditor General Timothy DeFoor to look at how the state is keeping illegal voters from registering in the process of getting a driver’s license.

Concerns are being raised over the Democrat majority on the Federal Communication

Commission’s (FCC) efforts to expedite the approval of a deal in which far-left activist financier George Soros will acquire more than 200 stations spanning 40 markets at once. Those stations currently carry conservative programming including Sean Hannity, Dana Loesch, Ben Shapiro, Mark Levin, Glenn Beck, and Erick Erickson.

Senate Democrats want to establish a federal grant program to subsidize trips to obtain abortions across state lines using taxpayer dollars.

U.S. Agency for International Development (USAID) gave $2 million of your tax dollars (they call it a grant!!) to a group in Guatemala that, among other things, promotes “gender-affirming care,” meaning sex changes.

A federal judge appointed by Bill Clinton recently ruled that Indiana taxpayers had to pay for a sex change operation demanded by a convicted child murderer.
